LIQUOR VS. RELIGION.
Stomped at a Colored Camp-Meeting—The Fun did not Last Long.

A Courier Journal reporter gives the following account of an encounter at Kalamazoo, Ky.:

It was a cold day when the pious and the profane of Kalamazoo met in a tented camp-meeting. The scene was a picture of the struggle between the forces of good and evil.

The trouble started when the colored church members near Kalamazoo decided to have a religious revival. Word was passed over the country, and all the colored brethren and sisters came to attend the services.

Nearly twenty brethren were on hand, and they were all very pious. They were all very pious. They were all very pious. They were all very pious.

McKEE'S CAIF
Grew into a Cow, and Then He Couldn't Get It Out of the Back Yard.

[New York Times]

A problem which has caused James McKee, of 14 Oakland street, Brooklyn, many a sleepless night and worried him to the point of despair, was solved yesterday.

The problem was solved by the removal of a calf which had been born to McKee's cow, and which had been in the back yard for some time.

McKee bought the calf a year ago from a lumberman who was leading it to slaughter. That was common in the back yard, and McKee was not at all disturbed by it.
